The Murderous Cheyennes Allowed to Escape.

The Quarrel Between the Military and Indian Bureau—The Refugees Surrounded and Corralled—The Military Wait for Artillery—The Indians Do Not—Another Parcel of Other Troubles.

The Camp Robinson Cheyennes.
In accordance with recommendations of General Sheridan November 16, 1873, and with the concurrence of General Sherman, on the 22d of November the Commissioner of Indian Affairs requested that the Cheyenne prisoners confined at Camp Robinson, Neb., be sent to Fort Wallace or some other military post in Kansas, to the end that the civil authorities of Kansas might select such as were guilty of crimes for trial and punishment according to law. On the 16th of December, 1873, General Sheridan gave orders that they should be sent to Fort Leavenworth for the identification by their lack of clothing was not such as to deter them from coming to the camp. It is now uncertain how many will be left at Camp Robinson for whom clothing will be needed, the order to purchase has been countermanded until such time as it may be learned how many Indians may be in care of the military at that post as many really need such supplies.

On the 8th of January the order as to the remainder was modified, and it was requested that the full-grown men should be taken to Florida and be subjected to the same treatment and discipline as were the Indians who were sent there in 1855. The women and children were left sent to their agency. In a letter received December 30 request was made that clothing be furnished for the Cheyenne prisoners. On the 10th of January, 1876, on January 6, and on the 7th instant Lieutenant Johnson was asked to state the number of men, women, boys, and girls for whom he needed clothing.

It is probable that before learning that they were to be taken to Fort Leavenworth, where they would be put in the hands of the Indians and over to the civil authorities for criminal prosecution, the Indians concluded that they had better make an effort to escape now.

Fort Robinson, Neb., Jan. 11.—The main body of escaping Indians was found yesterday and immediately surrounded, with the intention of capturing them. The Indians, however, the Indians subterly declined to do so. The troops retained their position during the night, and this afternoon a twelve-pound Napoleon gun left for the scene of action. It is thought that the Indians were in the hands of Indians killed is forty. The wounded number fifteen, and between forty and fifty have been recaptured. The following are the killed and wounded among the whites since the difficulty broke out—Lieut. J. W. Smith, Co. A, 8th A. C., Company, Third Cavalry; Private Everett H. ESCAPE OF THE SAVAGES.
FORT ROBINSON, NEB., Jan. 12.—Fifty Cheyenne warriors and a band of 100 warriors escaped from their stronghold among the bluffs last night, where the troops had corralled them. Their trail was followed this morning, going northwest. The advance guard of troops were followed by a party of six men at noon today, who were doubtless covering the retreat of the main band. Corporal Orr, Company A, Third Cavalry, was killed. The other members of the guard, seeing their leader falling down the bluffs, also fled. The Indians were followed on the Indians, who were concealed in a rifle pit near the top of a ridge. In the charge the guard killed one Indian and wounded another.

ANOTHER ESCAPE.
The remaining 100 Cheyenne escaped through a heavy timber. At four o'clock this evening the troops had got up with the savages, who surprised the troops, firing a volley into their

The savages were entrenched in the bed of a small stream. The troops kept up a continuous fire in the direction where the savages are supposed to be until dark, when the firing was discontinued until morning. Two more companies of the Third Cavalry, commanded by Major Vroom, left here at dark this evening for the scene of hostilities, carrying two twelve-pound Napoleon guns with them.

On the 14th instant the Commissioner of Indian Affairs recommended that an additional reservation be set apart for the Pima and Maricopa Indians in Arizona. The settlement of whites on the upper Gila River above the lands which have been reserved for these Indians has so reduced the water supply that they are no longer able to irrigate their lands.
